THE SWINDLER,

ILL GAINS NEVER THRIVE.

A Prise Story.

By J. A. Sperry.

Concluded.

'Do you not go out to sew sometimes?' asked he.

She answered him in the affirmative. He then asked her if she felt able to undertake some light work.

She replied that she was just out of employment at Madame G's. and would be glad to get anything to do.

'Can you call upon my sister to morrow morning?'

'Yes sir,' she replied, 'where shall I call, and what hour?'

'At No.—, Bleeker street; at any time during the forenoon.'

'The name?'

'Williams.'

'What! Emily Williams?'

'Yes,' said the young gentleman, 'you know her, then?'

'We used to be school-mates,' replied Catharine, 'but she does not remember me.'

'Will you favor me with your name?'

'Catharine Brainard.'

'Well I shall tell my sister you will call in the morning, Miss Brainard.' 'Yes sir.'

John now took his leave, and hurried home to communicate the result of his visit to his sister.

At twelve o'clock that night, the widow and her daughter had long been retired, but the nephew, unconscious of the lapse of hours sat in his room, pouring over a number of old letters, bills and manuscripts, which covered his table. The eager attention which he bestowed upon each paper, the unusual sparkle of his eye, and the smile that played upon his mouth, denoted that his task was one of no ordinary interest. Before we explain the nature of it, however, we must introduce him more fully to the reader.

Robert Jordan was an orphan. His parents had resided in a village some miles from New York, and at their death had left him a little property, the income of which was two hundred and fifty dollars per annum. With this small sum he came to New York, to pursue the study of law. He found his aunt keeping a boarding house, and went of course to board with her. The old lady knew of but little of the management of a boarding house, and consequently was unable to get along at it. The greater portion of her furniture was seized for debt, and she was compelled, with what was left, to take rooms in an old house near North River. Robert stuck by her thro' all her misfortunes, and with the little sum he was able to give her, and the scanty earning of Catharine's needle, she was enabled barely to live. Robert had just a few weeks prior to the date of our story been admitted to the Bar, and was daily expecting to make an arrangement to get into business with some old practioner, which would enable him to better the condition of his aunt and cousin. What the old lady had told him at the tea table, that evening, of Renwick's connection with his uncle, had made a forcible impression on his mind. There was an old fashioned secretary in his room, and in examining it, he found a secret drawer, filled with papers.—A suspicion flashed upon his mind that these papers might throw some light upon his uncle's business. He retired immediately to his room, and upon examining the papers, his suspicions were confirmed. They were private papers relating to Mr. Brainard's affairs, and contained evidence that at the time of his death, he had possessed a large amount of property, out of which it was plain that Renwick must have swindled the widow.

Nearly the whole night was Robert closely engaged making himself acquainted with the contents of the papers, and when at length he threw himself upon his couch, his breast was throbbing with hopes, and his head aching with excitement.

When Robert arose, late in the morning, he found his cousin was gone to keep her appointment with Emily Williams. He communicated to his aunt the discovery of the papers, and his hopes, and begged to place the whole affair in his hands as her attorney. The old lady, nearly beside herself with joy, gladly consented. Her next thought was to send for Catharine and communicate to her the agreeable tidings. This Robert opposed, and advised his aunt to keep the affair perfectly secret. He stated that the recovery of the property would be both difficult and uncertain, and that it might be dangerous to excite Catharine's best hopes, the disappointment of which would be too great a shock for her feeble health to bear. The old lady saw the justness of the remark and however loth, acquiesced Robert's wishes. The latter went immediately to work with alacrity, to put matters in train, for bringing suit against the swindler.

Catharine, in the meantime, had met with reception from Emily Williams as gratifying as unexpected. The latter, as soon as she had heard the name of Catharine Brainard, remembered her school mate, and with her natural kindness of heart, strove to make her forget, for one day at least, her poverty and her sorrows. She made her lay aside her sewing at 5 o'clock, and insisted on her spending the evening with her in the parlor. Here, with her brother, she strove to assure and render the poor girl cheerful, and succeeded so well that Catharine felt happier than she had for many months. She did not feel embarrassed or out of place, in the splendid parlor of the wealthy merchant, for she had been reared in just such splendor, and was scarcely behind Emily Williams herself, in education or accomplishments. She had that morning arrayed herself in her best apparel, which, plain as it was, displayed her delicate and graceful form to advantage, and the pleasurable excitement she had experienced brought a faint tinge of color to her cheek which added much to the beauty of her sweet face—her manners, too were easy and natural, although unassuming, as if she had never moved in any other sphere and John Williams, in discovering that she was 'deuced intelligent, and perfectly lovely,' entirely forgot the fact of her being a sewing girl.

Early in the evening Renwick came in—his surprise at finding Catharine Brainard Emily's guest, was manifest enough in his looks to the former, although it escaped the observation of the latter. He was embarrassed and confused, and after sitting a few moments, in uncomfortable constraint, plead an urgent engagement and left.

Catherine had left the word at home for her cousin to call for her at eight o'clock. Accordingly at eight o'clock Rober was ushered in, surprised to find Catharine enjoying herself in the parlor, instead of toiling the needle. He was introduced to Emily and her brother, but the latter had met him before and knew him to be a talented student at law, although his acquaintance with him was necessarily slight.

Emily seemed to have an unusual flow of spirits upon this occasion. As her brother expressed it she was 'as merry and playful as a kitten.'

She laughed and chatted with Robert Jourdan—played and sang for him, until he caught the spirit of her vivacity, and became as much at home and familiar as if he had been among old acquaintances.

To finish the amusment of the evening she sat her brother to playing the piano, and waltzed arround the rooom with Catharine untill she was giddy.

It had been a long time since the cousins had passed an evening of so much delight, and so fleetly did the time pass, that they were both astonished to hear the clock strike eleven, when they scarce thought it nine. When they took leave, Emily accompained Catharine to the door, and bidding her good night, with a kiss, slipped a purse into her hand and glided back into the room, before the gratiful girl had time either to refuse the gift, or utter thanks.

As soon as they were out of the house, Catharine burst into tears. Robert understanding her emotion, did not attempt to check it. By the time they had walked a square or two, however, she became composed, and commenced a conversation with her cousin upon the incidents of the day, and in the course of which she remarkeed—

'Emily is a sweet girl, cousin.'

'So I have been thinking,' he returned gadly.

'What a pity it is that she is going to marry Renwick.'

'What!' exclaimed Robert, abruptly.

'She is to be married to Mr. Renwick next april.'

'By all that is good she SHALL NOT!' ejaculated the young man.

'Why, cousin, are you demented—what are you saying?' asked Catharine, astonished at his emotion.

'I'm foolish,' rejoined the cousin, recovering himself, 'but it shocked me to hear of so fine a girl being sacrificed to a villain. But are you sure you have been correctly informed?'

'I had it from her own lips,' said Catharine, 'she has engaged me to commence next week making up some of the wedding garments.'

Robert made no other remark, but walked the rest of the way in thoughtful silence. When they arrived at their humble home they found Mrs. Brainard uneasy on account of their long absence. They gave the old lady an account of what had transpired, and Catharine upon examining her purse found it contained five dollars instead of the five shillings for which she had bargined to do the day's sewing.

It was with different feeligs the little party sought their pillows, this night, from those which had oppressed their hearts for many nights pevious. A brighter day was dawning.

A few days after the incident above related, George Renwick was sitting alone in his counting room when his entered, with an ominous elongation of countenance, and after a brief salutation said—

'I have just got wind of an affair, Mr. Renwick, that will give us some trouble.'

'What is that?' asked Renwick, calmly puffing his cigar.

'The widow Brainard is in the field again.'

Renwick slightly changed color, but affecting unconcern calmly replied—

'Well, if she is fool enough to revive the old suit she will get her fingers burnt again a few dollars transfered from my pocket to yours, in the way of fees, will be the amount of trouble, I suppose—eh, squire isn't that the state of the case?'

'I rather fear the business more serious this time!' returned the attorney.

'Well, let it come. So that you keep it off till after the first of April, I'm content to bear the brunt,'

'Unfortunately, it is not altogether a civil suit, and can't be put off. That young devil of a Jordon, her nephew, is making a criminal case of it, and the issue must come on at the March term.'

'Criminal case! March term! what do you mean?' demanded Renwick, with perceptible agitation.

'I mean,' answered the lawyer bluntly, 'that young Jordon, as wild as a fox and as keen as a blood hound is moving heaven and earth, in indite you for swindling, forgery and perjury.'

Renwick set his teeth hard together and seemed scarcely able to breath for a moment—then with pasionate energy opened his desk; and taking out a roll of bank bills amounting to five hundred dollars, he placed them in the hands of the attorney, exclaimed between his teeth.

'There, sir, crush the scoundrel—crush him! and I will be your debtor for double that sum!'

'That will be no easy matter,' returned the lawyer, as he coolly fobbed the fee. 'His shrewdness and energy are amazing. It beats the devil, sir, how he has managed to bring about this matter so quietly and effectually.—I'll do my best, however, depend upon it.'—And the lawyer abruptly withdrew, leaving Renwick with a fearful foreboding of impending ruin at his heart. The fear that his villainy would be unmasked, his wealth torn from him, and his marriage with Emily Williams prevented, filled him with almost insupportable agony—he had all along been preyed upon by a guilty conscience. The wan, half starved faces of the wife and child of his benefactor, whom he had robbed and beggared, had long haunted him with startling terror, driving rest from his pillow and peace from his breast—but this last deed of being convicted of forgery, and perhaps doomed to a felon's term in the State prison, was distracting.

He assumed as much fortitude as he could under the circumstances and taking an early opportunity to see his betrothed, urged an immediate marriage—offering as an excuse for his impatience, that business would compel him to go to Europe early in the spring, and that he wished to take her with him. But Emily whose feelings towards him had lately undergone a considerable change, frankly informed him that she feared her affections were not firmly enough fixed upon him to justify her in cosenting to an early union under any circumstances. he implored and entreated with all the eloquence of which he was capable.—She was firm in her determination, and his passion finally getting the better of his discretion, he reproached her with baseness, and left her forever.

So much did Renwick fear to stand the trial that was approaching, that he gathered up what ready money was at his command, amounting to 30 or thirty thousand dollars and secretly absconded.

The affair created considerable noise in the business world. Robert Jordan had so clearly made out his aunt's claim to the property in Renwick's possession, that he succeded in recovering for her what was left of it—about fifty thousand dollars, and Catharine was at once restored to her position in society.

We have but little more to tell.—

Robert's excellent management of the Renwick affair, and the notoriety it gained him, soon filled his hands with business, and he prospred accordingly. One year from that time he led Emily Williams to the alter, and upon the same night Catharine Bisnard became the blushing wife of Dr. John Williams.

All that was ever after heard of Renwick the swindler, was that he led the wretched life of a drunken gambler in New Orleans—that he was one night picked up in the streets in fit of delirium tremens, and taken to the hospital—thus affording another illustration of proverb that "the way of transgressor is hard."—Whether he died the vile death of the drunkard in the hospital, or recovered to lengthen out his miserable and degraded career was never ascertained.—Pa. Democrat.

THE PASTORAL LETTER.

The author of the Pastoral Letter dated Cincinnati; without the least apology or excuse, with the most unqualified assurance, the writer heaps every species of calumny found in the catalogue of vice, and even crime [as they now make out slavery to be] upon our government, and of course the people who authorized it, calling them

"Men of unprincipled character, and thus we have despised God's ordiance by disobeying His commands; and the consequence of such conduct we see in the present character of the Government. Immoral men; who despise everything which is holy—duellists, slaveholders, drunkards, profane swearers, and debauchees—have been called by christian voters to administer the affairs of civil government, which all admit to be the ordiance of God. How can the liberties of a nation be safe in the hands of scuh men? It is high time, therefore, for christians to act as christians in their citizen as well as their church capacity."

And what will they do? How will they prevent it? that seems to be the next question. If they had the power we know what they would do—they would go to hanging again as they did formerly. We know them. This is one of the "ordiances of God," we should call it by its proper name. These cannot be christians, if the gospel of Christ be true; for the gospel enjoins it upon its followers to speak evil of no one; but why have they not converted these people? inasmuch as they have not done so, they have played the swindler in obtaining money under false pretences, &c.

But what enhances the evil of which the writer stands accused, as a christian and want of fidelity to his country is, that he should hold seditious correspondence with licentious foreigners who are, and have long been sowing the seeds of discord, sedition amongst us; and he appeals to them against his own country. Did they act like brothers? like christians, or honest men when they interfered with an independent government—encouraging her citizens in treason, and doubtless fire and sword. Every sentence of the General Assembly referred to in a former HUNTRESS, as well as the Pastoral letter in relation to their own country is anti-republican and anti-christian.

In separating from the old church, they play the fool to perfection, "The General Assembly is not necessary to Presbyterianism." Then General Assembly says, "God will not side with them," meaning the regular church. Who told them so? They expose their ignorance, impiety, and falsehood so palpably in this, as in all their bare-faced wickedness that we are astonished they are suffered to go on. The very Angels in Heaven does not know who "God" sides with. One thing they may be sure of that he does not side with wicked hypocrites in christian cloaks.

But the Pious Pastor and his friends, though they have forfeited the support of the old Church—have discovered other resources to aid them in wresting the supreme power from the people of the United States. In other words to put down the Constitution and establish "God's ordiance," which from all we can gather is to put down sin by law. But let the people judge for themselves:

"You will see the action taken by Synod on the subject of Temperance.

'The complaint is ringing all over the land, that the cause of Temperance is retrograding. The various voluntary associations that have arisen to urge forward the cause, have failed in a great measure to accomplish the ends of their organization. It is high time now, after exhausting every human expedient, to try God's plan for removing moral evils. He has set up His church in the world as the great reforming agency. By the faithful administration of disipline by her officers, and by the faithful illustration of its spirit in the lives of her members, she becomes the salt of the earth, and the light of the world. So long as the church fosters in its bosom any sin all efforts to remove that sin from society will be aboritive."

Since we commenced this column we find by our exchanges that the anger of this Church and State party is wrought up to the highest pitch, at the success of Father Mathew. They say it is altogether a worldly affair.* But only hear the Parson. If he has not a cracked brain he has a cracked conscience, it "is ringing all over the land, that the Temperance cause is retograding." * * * "It is high time now to try God's plan. What a blasphemer!! every thing is God in their mouths, God's law, God's ordiance, God's Army, Gods people, God's treasury, and "God gave Jesus Christ the valley of the Mississippi,"—cute Yankee ain't he. But when God's army sounds the war bugle it will find an answer.

The man who prostrates the sacred name of his Creator to the vilest purposes, ought to be avoided as we would an unchained maniac. But we return to his remarks on Temperance.

"It is time to try God's plan for removing moral evils," the moral evils of our "unprincipled government," included of course. And what is God's plan? We have always understood that "true repentence and faith in Jesus Christ" was the only way to remove evil, and that there was no other way to become a christian. This is one of God's ordiances.—But the gentleman has a long rigmarole about God, without naming Jesus Christ. "He has set up his Church in the world as the great reforming agency." This Church, of which the Pastor seems to be a conspicuous member, "by the faithful administration of [illegible]-discipline by her officers, [illegible] such discipline as our officers use in the Navy perhaps, with the Colt, and the cat, like the Pilgrim Fathers used, when they tied innocent females to the cart-tail, and scurged them on the naked back! cutting out their tongues, hanging them &c.

But let him speak for himself, after illustrating his argument beforehand he says:

"In like manner, so long as the manufacturer, vender, and seller of intoxicating liquors as a beverage are allowed to come to the Lord's table, and there have their characters endorsed as Christian, intemperance will triumph. The jails, poor houses, courts of justice, and hell itself, will be crowded with victims. Now, the place to begin this reform as well as all others is the church. See to it, then, dear brethern, that the spirit of Synod's action is carried out—that no man be tolerated in the communion of the church who is so deficient in Christian character, as to make, sell, or use intoxicating liquors as a beverage, or contribute in any way to the odious and sinful business. To be guilty of such conduct in an immorality, and every immorality is a breach of the great rule which God has laid down in the moral law as the standard for judging Christian character. Let us as a church have no part nor lot in the ignominy of sanctioning and sanctifying the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. And let us in our religious capacity endeavor to bring the law to bear upon the traffic in ardent spirits as it does upon theft, arson, and other crimes. The men who are engaged in poisoning the happiness of society in this way are not to be reached by moral and religios considerations.—Like other criminals, they have become hardened to iniquity, and neither fear the authority of God nor regard the interests of man.'

* * * * * *

"'We speak not this because any makers, venders, and drinkers of alcoholic spirits are found in the communion of the free church, but to warn you against the danger of allowing such persons to connect with the church. Experience proves that it is easy to keep sin out of the church, but that it is extremely difficult to banish it after it has gained an entrance. As we have but recently commenced our existence as a denomination of christians, let us elevate the standard of morals to the Scripture height, so that future accessions to our numbers may not hinder our work as a reforming body."

They seem to thirst for the blood of the people. It will be recollected that some years ago this same party called a temperance convention to meet at Middletown, Connecticut—very few if any attended, but the Church and State party, though some were from other States than New England.

Almost every item connected with the manufacturing of domestic spirits from the farmer who tilled the grain to the persons who drank it were discussed with great warmth and vehemence.

Amongst various modes of punishment a bitter bigot from New York State, but of Pilgrim descent, proposed to make it piracy! that the farmer who raised the grain, the distiller, the wholesale and retail dealer, consumer and all were to suffer the penalty of Pirates. This was no sooner announced than a fine old Presbyterian Elder from Pennsylvania jumped up with a face red as scarlet, and moved to adjourn the convention. He said he had many neighbors who were Elders of the church, and "as good christians as any on that convention, that raised their own grain and distilled it into whiskey, and sends it to market and sell it," and a majority siding with the gentleman the convention as we were informed, adjourned shortly afterwards, and this is the first time we have heard of them since.

Lo how many new sins, nay crimes the new "free Presbyterian Church," have discovered, viz. slavery, Intemperance, and Temperance by Father Mathew. His Temperance is worse than getting drunk by the new Church. Besides all these there is the Sabbath to come yet.

APPEARANCES!

Think not because the eyes are bright
And smiles are laughing there,
The heart that beats within is light,
And free from pain and care.
A blush may tinge the darkest cond,
Ere Sol's last rays depar;
And underneath the sunniest smile
May lurk the saddest heart.

Mirth's sudden gleam may light the cheek,
Though joy be far away,
As blossoms oft adorn the tree
That's hastening to decay;
Alas! 'tis but the varying hue
Of April's wayward hours—
A sunbeam bursting brightly through,
When all beneath are showers.

For there are pangs the sorrowing heart,
Will oft in darkness shroud,
That lurk within the lonely debths
Like lightning in the cloud;
As falls the shadow on the path,
When bright the sunbeam's glare,
Whichever way our thoughts are turned,
That darksome shape is there.

Though brightly o'er the hallow cheek,
The smile, the laugh may break,
Like bubbles bursting on the breast
Of Ascheron's dark lake;
They are but o tward signs to hide
The deadly pangs we feel,
As o'er the lone and mouldering tower,
The rose is aught to steal.

DR TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

Most extraordinary Medicine in the world

This Extract is put in quart bottles. It is six times cheaper, pleasanter, and warranted superior to any sold. It cures diseases, without vomting. purging, sickening, or debilating the patient.

The great beauty and superiority of this Sarsaparilla over all other remedies is, while it eradicates disease, it invigorates the body.

IT HAS PERFORMED MORE THAN 15,000 CURES THIS YEAR.

1,000 cures of Rheumatism.
1,000 cures of Dyspepsia.
2,500 cures of General Debility and Want of Nervous Energy.
30,000 Female Complaints, and over 7,000 cures of Diseases of the Blood viz:

Ulcers, scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, pimples on the face, &c., together with nervous cases of consumption liver complaint spine affections, &c This, we are aware, must appear incredible, but we have letters from physicians and our agents from all parts of the United States informing us of extraordinary cures. R Van Buskirk, Esq., one of the most respectable druggists in Newark, New Jersey, informs us that he can refer to more than one hundred and fifty cases in that place alone. There are thousands of cases in the city of N. York which we will refer to with pleasure, and to men of character well known.

OPINIONS OF PHYSICIANS.

Dr. Townsend is almost daily receiving orders from physicians in different parts of the Union.

This is to certify that we, the undersigned physicians of the city of Albany, have in numerous cases prescribed Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla and beleive to be one of the most valuble preparations of Sarparilla in the Market:

P H. Puling, M. D. R. B. Briggs, M. D.
P E. Elmendorf, M. D.
Albany, April 1, 1845.

The following is from one of the most respectable physicians on Long Island:

GREENPORT July 19, 1846.

DR. TOWNSENDS—Dear Sir—it is with satisfaction that I have recently witnessed, in several cases the most beneficial results from your extract of Sarsaparilla. Be engaged in the practice of medicine, I have prescribed it in several cases, and never without benefit. In the removal of diseases arising from a deranged state of the disgestive orvans, jaundice, &c if far exceeds any thing of the kind ever offered to the public, You will please send me two dozen, &c.

Respectfully yours,
C, S, PRESTON, M D.

UNITED STATES OFFICER.

Capt G W Mclean, Member of the Legislature, and late of the U. S. Navy; has kindly sent us the following certificate. It tells its own story.

RAHWAY Jan. 25 1847.

A year since I was taken with the influenza and my whole system left in a debilitated state. I was induced to try Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla,

B after taking two or three bottles, I was very much relieved, and attributed it entirely to the said Sarsaparilla. I have continued taking it, and that I improve every day. I believe it saved my life, and would not be without it under any consideration.

G W. McLEAN.

SCROFULA CURED.

This certificate conclusively proves that this Sarsaparilla has perfect control over the most obstinate diseases of the blood. Three persons cured in one house is unprecedented,

THREE CHILDREN.

DR. TOWNSEND—Dear Sir, I have the pleasure to inform you that three of my children have been cured of the scrofula by the use of your excellent medecine. They were aflicted very severely with bad sores; having taken only four bottles; it took them away, for which I feel myself under deep obligation.

yours respectfully,
ISAAC W. CRAIN, 108 Woost

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

A MAMMOTH PAPER.

DEVOTED TO MORALITY, PURE LITERATURE, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS, AGRICULTURE, SCIENCE, ART AND AMUSEMENT.

This paper contains from one-fourth to one half more than the generality of two Dollar city weeklies.

The Proprietors of the SATURDAY EVENING POST return their cincere thanks to their friends and the public for the patronage extended to them since the enlargement of their paper, and respectfully solicit a continuance of the same. The belief expressed in their last Prospectus, that the POST is destined to take its stand at the very head of the weekly press, is fast becoming realized. The reason of this is in a great degree, to be found in the stand the POST has always taken against the immoral literature of the day. The public have felt, in the language of the North American and United States Gazette, of this city, that "The Post has done much towards correcting the taste of the newspaper reading public."

TERMS.

The terms to single subscribers are 2,00 dols per annum, in advance, 3,00, if not paid in advance. For five dollars in advance, one copy will be sent three years.

TERMS TO CLUBS.

In order to accommodate the large number who wish to take a first class paper, but mistakingly think they cannot afford it, we continue the following low terms for Clubs—to be sent, in the city, to one address, and, in the country, to one Post Office:

4 COPIES,
8 (And one to Agent, or getter up of the Club)	10,00

Lady's Book for six dollars.

Three Copies of the Saturday Evening Post and two of the Ladies Garland for five dollars

Two Copies of the Saturday Evening Post, and two of the Fountain, (containing 252 pages of original letter press, and 8 of Sartains best Magazine engravings) for four dollars.

ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

The Money for Clubs must always be sent in advance. Subscriptions may be sent at our risk (when the sum is large, a draft should be procured if possible—the cost of which may be deducted from the amount.) Address,

DEACON & PETERSON, No 66 South third Street, Philadelphia.

☞ Editors copying the above, or who will give a fair notice of the paper [we ask not that it shall be praised, but be noticed] in their editorial columns, shall be entitled to an exchange. Such as are ready entitled to an exchange for the current year, shall receive our thanks.

N. B.—Any person desirous of recieving a copy of the Post, as a sample, can be accommodated by notifying the Publishers by letter, post paid.

THE GLOBE,

Congressional, Agricultural, and Literary Newspaper.

The Editors of the Congressional Globe propose a new publication. To deserve the patronage which Congress has accorded to their reports of its debates, in receiving and making the Globe the official register, they intend to add promptitude to whatever merit has hitherto recommended the work. They will publish a Daily Globe, to record the proceedings and debates as they occur, and a Congressional Globe periodically as heretofore, embodying the reports of Congres separate from the miscellaneous matter which will accompany them in the daily print. To fill the sheet of the daily newspaper, it is designed to gather the news from all quarters, and complete the contents by drawing from every source what ever may be of most interest among literary novelties, and of greatest utility in science, art, or agriculture. For material the leading journals and periodicals of France and Great Britain, treating of such subjects will be consulted and it is hoped, advantageously used. Original essays, especially on topics connected with agriculture, wil be obtained from the most enlightened land practical men of our country.

The Globe as a newspaper, and as a vehicle of information and amusement in other respects will be under the charge of Francis P. Blair and James C. Pickett. The Congressional department and business concerns of the paper will be under the management of John C. Rives. The public are familiar with Blair and Rives as connected with the press. In introducing Mr Pickett as one of the concern they will be allowed to say a few words of him. He is a gentleman favorably known to the Government, for the talent and judgment which distinguished his diplomatic service while connected with the mission to Quito, and more recently when Charge d'Affaires to Peru. From him mainly the Globe will derive the selections and translations from the foreign continental journals and periodicals, the comments on them and the other literary articles which will be found among its chief attractions. F. P. Blair will give his attention principally to the English periodicals.

The Globe will be published daily during the session of Congress and weekly the balance of the year and will undergo distribution in the form of a Weekly Globe, a Congressional Globe and Appendix.

The Weekly Globe will contain agricultural and miscellaneous articles.

The Congressional Globe will embody as it has done for the last sixteen years. Congressional proceedings and debates exclusively.

The Appendix will embrace the revised speeches separately and the messages of the President of the United States and the reports of the Heads of the Executive Departments.

The Congressional Globe and appendix will be published as fast as the proceedings of Congress will make a number. Subscribers may expect one number of each a week during the first four weeks of a session and two or three numbers of each a week, afterwards, until the end of the session.

Complete indexes to the Congressional Globe and appendix, will be sent to subscribers soon after Congress adjourns.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Daily Globe daily during the session of Congress, and weekly during the recess, a year, $5 00

For one copy of the Weekly Globe one year, 2 00

For one copy of the Congressional Globe during the present session, if subscribed for before the first of January, 1 00

For one coppy of the Appendix during the present session, if subscribed for before the first of January, 1 00

For six copies of either the Congressional Globe or the appendix, or part of both, 5 00

The subscription for the Congressional Gobe or the Appendix after the 10th of January will be $1.50. The original price of one dollar does not pay the expense of the publications in consequence of the great increase of matter published.

G. BROOKE & CO

Would respectfully inform the citizens of Washington, Georgetown and Alexandria, and the public generally that they have made such arrangements with the dublishers and others as to enable them to offer inducements to subscribers and others, that are not to be met with at any other establishment in the District:

from their long and familir acquaintance with the business in this city, they feel confident that they can give satisfaction to all customers who may be pleased to favor them with a call, and they assure subscribers and public that no pains will be spared to make the Literary depot corner of Pennsylvania avenue and fourteenth street, equal to any establishment of the kind south of New York.

TO THE FRIENDS OF "THE PLOUGH LOOM, AND ANVIL."

POPULAR as this journal is, and so far successful beyond any heretofore established, its income is yet something short of paying its own expenses, leaving the editors to live on air or hope, neither of which is very substantial deit. Now, as we believe that we have not a friend who would willingly see the man want bread who has been more than thirty years teaching others how to make it, we at once frankly solicit our present patrons to use their influence to average one more subscriber each, and then "the Plough, the Loom, and the Anvil," and those who are working at it, will be doing what is commonly called a safe bussiness, and not until then. We are truly sorry to be under the necesity of making this appeal, for, could we afford it, we would rejoice, as on past occasions. to show that we would most willingly work as hard, gratuitously for the great industrial interests of the country, as we are now doing in the hope of at least a scanty support.

P. S. We shall not fail to note the favor if any kind brother Editor should give this a place in his paper to help along one of the oldest of the fraternity.

TERMS of the PLOUGH, LOOM, and ANVIL, $10 for five subscribers, $5 for two, and $3 for one, or $5 for two years subscription, 64 pages a month.

BETTER AND CHEAPER THAN EVER !!!

☞NEVER IN THE REAR!☜

A NEW PAPER MAMMOTH SIZE

Reduced price, Increased Beauty,

AND AUGMENTED INTEREST!!

The undersigned having purchased the disputed claim on the old Saturday Courier, and being determined not to be surpassed in the competition among the press For popularity beauty and excellence, will now combine the unrivaled and unapproachable material of the old paper, with the renewed energy enterprise novelty and spirit of a new one and will issue, on the 11th day of March, 1848 in the city of Philadelphia the first number of a new weekly Newspaper, of the very first and largest class, entitled

M'MAKIN'S MODEL.

AMERICAN COURIER

Published and edited by ANDREW M'MAKIN now editor of the Saturday Courier.

Assisted by a gentleman, universally acknowledged as one of the most talented and popular writers of the age.

The farmers Department, of the Courier will be edited. It is expected, by the most distinguished Agriculturist in the united States whose name will be announced as soon as the pending negotiations are contempleted.

THE AMERICAN COURIER

Will contain the amount of eight more columns of matter than does the "Saturday Courier," and it will be conducted strictly on the CASH PRINCIPEL, will, with all its Artistic and literary improvements, be offered at a much reduced price to "Clubs,"

The editor of the American courier feels confident that not a pledge will be required of time to the character of the new paper, other than that it will be a family newspaper, neueral in politics and religion; chaste in morality and moderate but elevated in tone and sentiment. His long connection with the "Saturday courier,"—which, under at least his co editorship, reached the largest similar circulation in the world,—will be ample pledge that every intelligent and respectable family in the land may safely confide in his taste, judgment and energy, with the aid of comparatively unlimited capital, to cater for their mental appetite

The contents of the American Courier.

Among the standard features of the american courier, will be—a new series of 'Washington Legends,' by George Lippard, esq. The 'portrait Gallery' of poets and their poetry—each Biography Rustrated, Original domestic tales, by themost distinguished writers of the day. Original essays, sketches, poems, and letters on useful and important subjects. Engraved views of persons, scenes and things of interest Select tales from the best english and american authors. The "Modern Spectator, in wich it will be designed to

"EYE nature's walk, shoot Folly as it flies and catch the manners living as they rise

Together with every useful novelty that ingenuity, skill and talent can advise.

THE FARMERS DEPARTMENT will immediately take and maintain an originality and value not approachable by any family journal in the land the editor having engaged several writers of known and acknowledged ability to furnish practical articles on model farming.

The markets, news and gossip of the day will be objects of special care in detail, and nothing will be left undone by mind or money.
